NEWS CENSORSHIP IMPOSED AFTER MURDER ATTEMPT

Bullet Fired at The President Of Greece Makes Scalp Wound

INVESTIGATION IS MADE

Radical Press Is Now Under The Eye of The Censors

ATHENS, Oct. 31 (I.N.S.)—A censorship was imposed upon the radical press today following an attempt to assassinate Admiral Kondouriotis, president of Greece, by 25-year-old Zafios Goussios, a former waiter. The bullet inflicted only a scalp wound and the President is improving in the hospital. Unless a toxic condition develops he will soon be able to leave.

The police are still investigating to determine if Goussios is a communist. The prisoner, during a second examination today, denied any connection with the Communist party. He said he was out of work, hungry and despondent and tried to kill Kondouriotis in sheer desperation. The Communist party repudiated Goussios.

Recently the Greek government refused to give the Greek Communists permission to send a delegation to Moscow to participate in the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Soviet government.

Church Organizations To Hold Social Night

The Ladies' Aid of the Harriman M. E. Church, and the Harriman Men's Club, will hold a Halloween social in the rooms of the above club on Monday evening, October 31st, at 8 o'clock.

This social is one of the many affairs these organizations hold during the year, and from all accounts promises to outdo any of the previous functions yet held to date.

The social is open to any member of either organization, their wives, husbands and friends.

It is hoped that those attending will come in a masked attire, in order that competition for the prizes to be given away will cause the judges to use their utmost ability in selecting the winners.

The games and refreshments for the evening speak for themselves, and it is promised there will be no lax moments for those who will attend.

Hulmeville

Charles Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Smith, who is a student at Lafayette College, Easton, has been elected an honorary member of the Tau Beta Pi, an engineering fraternity at said college. Mr. Smith passed the week-end here as the guests of his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rommel and daughters, of Bristol, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Ahlee, of Main street.

Miss Fannie Black, of Trenton avenue, is substituting as an instructress in the commercial department of the Pitman, N. J., high school. Miss Black week-ended at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Black.

SEW TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, members and directors of the Needlework Guild will meet in the Community House to sew. This is the last day for sewing before the annual exhibition which is to be held November 15th. All are urged to attend.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS 25 BOMBERS BUILT HERE

Contract for Latest Type Planes Awarded to The Keystone Company

MEANS MUCH LOCALLY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Contracts for twenty bombing planes, designed to carry 2000 pounds of bombs and five machine guns, have been awarded to the Keystone Aircraft Company of Bristol, Pa., by the War Department announced today. The new planes are to be the first produced under plans for re-equipment of the bombardment units of the Army Air Corps, and their design resulted from extensive tests of the type, which is designated the L. B. 5 A.

The planes will have a six-hour cruising radius at an average speed of about 100 miles an hour. Two machine guns will be mounted in the forward cockpit, two in the rear cockpit and one tunnel-gun is designed to shoot through the floor. They will be powered by two Liberty motors, while the fuselage will provide room for a pilot, mechanic, machine gunner and a bombardier. The new planes will be sent to Langley Field, Virginia, and planes now in use there will be sent to Kelly Field, Texas, for use of student fliers.

Edgely Needlework Guild Has Successful Card Party

Others who were present: Mrs. Horace Burton, Mrs. H. Doyle Webb, Miss Georgine MacMichel, Miss Esther Lawrence, Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Mrs. Franklin Wills, Mrs. Edward Renk, Mrs. T. B. McGee, Mrs. John Wicher, Mrs. Forrest Bilderback, Mrs. John Thorne, Mrs. Albert L. Sheppard and Mrs. George Garrettson.

On Tuesday, November 1, the guild members will assemble at the home of Mrs. Hawkes to sew. The group will meet at 2.15. The exhibition will likewise take place at "Shady-side" on Armistice Day, November 11th.

Children Enjoy Hallowe'en Party At Baxter Home

Miss Irene Baxter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baxter, of Beaver street, entertained a few of her friends at a Hallowe'en party at her home on Wednesday night.

The boys and girls arrived masked and were dressed in a comical manner. After playing several games, refreshments were served.

Those present were: Irene Sharp, Dorothy McGill, Irene Baxter, Buddy McGill, John Murphy.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS

The Camp Fire Girls gave a Hallowe'en party in St. James's Parish House, on Thursday evening. Those present were: Alice Taylor, Katherine Chant, William Paynter, Anthony Gilton, Rose Stephenson, Emma Stephenson, William Pursell, Alberta Ricketts, Sylvia Howell, Lawrence Machette, Helen Holmes, Fred Chamberlain, Edward Slack, Edith Allen, Horace Davis, Ellis Ratcliffe, Walbroutha Strint, Elizabeth LaRue, Daisy Strout, Mary McAlty, Thomas Peterson.

HALLOWE'EN FESTIVITIES STILL CONTINUE THRUOUT BOROUGH

Card Parties Please Many, With Favors and Decorations In Keeping With the Sporting Night Of Witches

On Saturday afternoon, the primary and infant department of St. James's Sunday School held a Hallowe'en party in the parish house, under the direction of Mrs. William H. Thompson.

About 75 children attended and all were masked. Prizes were awarded for fancy, comic and most original dress. The judges were: Mrs. Lawrence Machette, Mrs. Willard Wilson, and Isaiah Burtonwood and they had a hard time deciding the winners.

Norma Wenzel, dressed as a Dutch girl, captured first prize; and Mildred Machette as George Washington received second prize for fancy dress costumes. For the most original dress, Jane McAuley was the winner, dressed as an old fashioned girl. The comic dress prize was given to Evelyn Stevenson, attired as a wild man, which was a very clever imitation. Margaret and Lillian Gilton received a special prize. They represented ballet girls.

The afternoon was spent playing various games. One game, pinning the eyes on the pumpkin, was won by Junior McAuley and Doris Chilton, for which they received prizes.

At this party a number of birthdays were celebrated, which occurred within the past several months. They were as follows: June McLaughlin, Irene Sharp, Vivian Houser, Charlotte Landreth, Dorothy Speakman, whose anniversaries occurred during the month of June. In July, Nan Townsend; August, Ruth Rothenberg; September, Margaret Gilton, Marion Mulholland, Norma Wenzel, Buddy Tomlinson; October, David Abbott, Billy Roberts.

After the games were over, refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake, peanuts and lollipops were served. The children then departed for their homes, rather tired but happy.

Miss Mary Fallon, of Buckley street, entertained a number of friends at a Hallowe'en party on Saturday evening.

The guests were invited to mask, and a good time was had by all. Those present tried to guess the identity of each.

The living room was prettily decorated with orange and black crepe paper streamers, draped from the four corners of the room, while two black cat faces, which were lighted, hung from either side of the colonnades.

After enjoying the evening playing games and dancing, the guests were invited to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with crepe paper streamers, black cats, witches and pumpkin faces. A large black cat face hung from the center of the dome over the table. Each guest received a favor, made of orange and black crepe paper, representing cats, pumpkins.

MAKE DRIVING TESTS OF NEW FIRE APPARATUS

Machines Will Be Driven About Town So As To "Limber Up"

OFFICIAL TESTS SOON

Representatives of the Ahrens-Fox Fire Engine Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, today began "limbering-up" the new fire apparatus of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Company, previous to the official tests which are to be given some time later in the week.

Four of the five pieces of fire apparatus arrived last week. It is expected that the fifth piece will reach here within the new day or two.

The Philadelphia Suburban Underwriters will supervise the tests which are to be made of the new apparatus, and which it is thought will be made about Thursday next. Previous to these tests it is necessary to run the machines a certain number of miles so as to make sure that all mechanical parts are working properly. Representatives of the Ahrens-Fox Company, the manufacturers, today will begin driving the machines about the streets of Bristol, so as to be sure that all working parts are in O. K. condition, before the machines are put to the severe tests demanded by the Underwriters.

"We will probably drive the various pieces of apparatus about the streets for the next three or four days," it was stated today by a representative of the Company. The machines will be driven, it is understood, at a speed of between 12 and 14 miles per hour. Various observations will be made during this driving test so as to check up on the action of the machinery in every detail.

Mrs. Edward Renk, of Pond street, entertained a number of friends at a masquerade party at her home on Friday night. An enjoyable evening was spent playing "500", there being three tables of players formed.

Those winning prizes were: Miss Mary Wilkinson, Miss Ellen Gilkeson, Miss Cecelia Jefferies, Mrs. Anna Ridge.

Refreshments were served. The decorations were orange and black crepe paper streamers, attractively draped around the room.

The invited guests were: Mrs. M. Gilkeson, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. L. Machette, Mrs. E. Renk, Miss Anna Sackville, Miss Boyd, Miss Ellen Gilkeson, Miss Nora Jones, Miss Cecelia Jefferies, Miss A. Hess, Miss Mary Wilkinson.

Miss Elizabeth McBrien, of Madison street, was hostess to a few of her friends on Wednesday evening. A very pleasant evening was spent playing "500."

The prize winners were: Mrs. Ellis Ratcliffe, Miss Eva Smoyer, Miss Anna Sackville. Refreshments were served at a late hour. The invited guests were: Mrs. Hazel Woodruff, Mrs. Anna Ridge, Mrs. Ellis Ratcliffe, Miss Ellen Gilkeson, Miss Cecelia Jefferies, Miss Anna Sackville, Miss Eva Smoyer, Miss Elizabeth McBrien.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ridge, of Madison street, were host and hostess to a few of their friends on Saturday evening at a Hallowe'en party.

The guests arrived in costume and a very pleasant evening was spent playing "500." Refreshments were served at a late hour.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. James Ridge, Miss Anna Sackville, Miss Cecelia Jefferies, Mr. MacKay, Mr. Robert Thorpe.

FEDERATED CLUBS IN SESSION AT LANGHORNE

Miss Broadhurst, Dr. Holmes Were Principal Speakers At the Affair

PLAN A SCHOLARSHIP

LANGHORNE, Oct. 31.—"Carrie Chapman Catt says ninety per cent. of the women's clubs are useless," quoted Mrs. Irvin M. James, president of the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs at their session held at the Bucks County Country Club, Friday. "I don't believe Mrs. Catt is right," continued Mrs. James. "Not if we succeed in accomplishing some definite work." It was then proposed that the federation should consider financing a scholarship in home economics at State College for some worthy girl. An unnamed benefactor has promised to add to the fund $5 for every $10 raised by each club.

Mrs. J. J. Edgerton, president of Langhorne Sorosis, welcoming the 250 women, the largest group ever assembled at one of these meetings, said: "Won't you all, as our dear old grandmothers would say, 'come in, lay off your things and make yourselves at home'?"

Mrs. James, responding to this address of welcome, wished that the pioneer settlers of "Four Lanes' End," such as Jeremiah Langhorne, might witness this representative gathering of women who take such a constructive part in public affairs and yet lose none of their womanliness nor allow their homes to suffer neglect.

Mrs. Charles Ort, secretary, read the minutes of the Spring meeting held at Southampton and Mrs. Albert J. Thompson, treasurer, reported a prosperous condition of the federation's finances.

Mrs. James spoke of an auxiliary branch of the S. P. C. A. being organized (Continued on Page Four)

BRISTOL A. A. ELEVEN WINS OVER LANSDALE

Initial Touchdown Is Made In The Second Period Of Game

FINAL SCORE IS 13 TO 6

Bristol's big football team, led by "Al" Bauers, defeated Lansdale in a hard fought game yesterday afternoon on Sullivan's Field before a large gathering of fans, which took advantage of the ideal weather. The score was 13 to 6. Spectacular line-plunging and forward passing was responsible for both of Bristol's touchdowns. Jay Fine, burly full-back of the home boys, plunged through the visitors' line for the Blue and Gold initial touchdown in the second period.

Frank Cook caught a long accurate pass from Bud David in the final quarter and side stepped a number of Lansdale players scoring the winning touchdown after carrying the ball 35 yards. This same player kicked the point after touchdown. Lansdale's lone touchdown came in the first few minutes of play in the opening period as a result of a long forward pass, Racus to Hunsworth, the latter being downed on Bristol's five yard line. Detweiler, former Lafayette College fullback, carried the ball across on the next play for the visitors.

First Period
Bristol kicked off well down into the visitors' territory. Detweiler receiving the ball and carrying it back about 15 yards. An off-tackle play through Bristol's left side netted Lansdale about four yards. Racus then carried the ball around end for a first down. On the next play this same player tossed a forward which a Bristol back knocked right into Hunsworth's hands, who ran to Bristol's eight yard line before being brought down. A series of line plunges took the ball to the goal line where Detweiler carried it over for a touchdown. Racus missed the point after touchdown. The Bristol team finally got possession of the ball and started a steady march down the field, playing straight football, making big gains. The line plunging of Fine, Sackville, and Coyle featured. The ball was on Lansdale's 20 yard line when the quarter ended. Score: Lansdale, 6; Bristol, 0.

Second Period
On the first play in this period "Lefty" Rogers dashed around end for five yards but Bristol was penalized for offside and lost five yards. At this point Frank Cook went in for Lawler who showed the fans that he is a coming star and a wonderful understudy to Cook and Roe. Bristol tried a forward pass which was grounded and lost the ball on downs on the visitors' 20-yard line. Lansdale kicked out of danger, Sackville carrying the ball back to his 35 yard line. Another march was started by the home lads, Al Baur and his line men making big holes for the backs to tear through. Bristol getting three first downs in succession. Right down the field they went, sweeping the Lansdale line aside, "Jay" Fine going over for the touchdown that tied the score. Cook missed the try for the extra point.

Jim Sackville, sterling quarterback, pulled a clever play at this point. His signal was called to go through the line but the quarterback found the hole closed when he got there. Sackville immediately switched around end for a substantial gain. Bristol, 6; Lansdale, 6.

Third Period
"Zeke" Weissblatt started the second half at quarterback for Bristol and abandoned the huddle system and started calling the signals. This method seemed to help the boys to get off their plays much better. The teams battled bitterly with many casualties (Continued on Page Four)

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED

The callow youth in the high-powered car who announces his appearance before the door of his chosen one with loud and long honking of his horn, must be served. It is a free country, and if the distance from his car to the door-bell is too great for his ported, aching feet, over-punished by dancing, why, he has a perfect right to use a modern method of communication.

What does it matter to him that in the house next door there may be children trying to go to sleep, or a sick person who needs perfect quiet? Youth must be served.

Again when he returns with the fair one from the movie or the dance or the jolly jaunt through the country, has he not a right to churn his motor for several minutes after saying good-night? And if he shoots off down the street with gears meshed in low and motor spinning at the top notch of possible revolutions, whose concern is that? If the poor dumbbells have nothing better to do than to retire before the small hours of morning, let them take the consequences. Youth must be served.

There are some people who think that youth behaving in this perfectly natural way should be served, and served by a police summons, and later served by a stiff fine or a sentence of a few days in the quiet pen. But, of course, such are poor crabs who have not sense of the fitness of things. Why bother about them? Honk for your girl all you like. Bawl outside her door like a bull calf at the bars calling for its mother. Strip the gears of the old man's car if you get any satisfaction out of doing it. Keep your hand on the siren all the way down the block.

Only dead ones have nerves anyway. If they don't like it, let them take the air.

Youth must be served.

AMERICAN WEALTH GROWS

This year the national income of the American people is expected to exceed that for 1926, which was almost ninety billions of dollars, an increase of twenty-seven billions over the income for 1921. The increase between 1921 and 1926 was a "real" jump because there was no accompanying rise in prices to reduce the value of the 1926 dollar, and the larger income this year over last will be a "real" increase because prices have receded in the last ten months.

An annual income greater than the entire national wealth of Germany and possibly France will not be overlooked by debtor nations in Europe. More than ever will be stressed the contrast between the overwhelming prosperity of the United States and the impoverishment of the continent. The contrast is there, and the arguments therefrom drawn for American generosity toward debtor nations gain in weight, but only in the mind of the debtors.

The facts do not, however, justify the familiar argument which asserts a close connection between Europe's poverty and America's abounding wealth. America's prosperity is not mainly nor even largely the fruits of European misery. This country is not still living off its war profits. The war counted in some degree. It broke at a time of apparently imminent business depression, but at the most, saved this country from two years of hard times, which would have been less costly than the war.

Echoes of the Past

Items of Interest as Gleaned from old files of Bucks County Newspapers

The Newtown Enterprise dated August 29, 1892, contained the following items of interest:

The surveyors of the Pennsylvania through line from Bustleton to Morrisville had been making a topographical survey across the Neshaminy above Hulmeville dam. Several different lines had been run between the farm house on E. G. Harrison's farm and Andrew K. Joyce's farm. It was thought that the new line would connect with the Cut-Off Railroad about a mile west of Fallsington. This road when built was to be the most direct line that could be made between Trenton and Philadelphia, through a country unsurpassed for its fertility.

An accident happened on the merry-go-round at Trenton Park on Wednesday afternoon of last week, the occasion of the picnic of the Yardley Episcopal Sunday School at that place. While collecting the fares the proprietor's wife's dress caught in the cogs and before the machinery could be stopped she was fearfully torn and mangled about the body and limbs. Drs. Smith and Gillam who happened to be on the grounds, rendered surgical assistance.

Edward McGrath, living on the Scott farm, near Langhorne, had two old turkeys and sixteen young ones killed by dogs, one night the previous week.

Benlah, wife of Alfred H. Moon, of Falls township, died suddenly one day the previous week while on a visit to West Grove, Chester county.

William Gillam, a brother of Jonathan W. Gillam, of Langhorne, died at the residence of his son-in-law, in Plainfield, N. J., on the 8th inst. The interment was in Langhorne Friends' ground.

In the issue dated September 10, 1892, the following appeared:

The Bucks County Women's Auxiliary of World's Fair Managers, by the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. A. Weir Gillespie, of Bristol, met at their hospitable home on the banks of the Delaware.

were at Bristol. Newtown's representatives on that committee were Mrs. George A. Jenks and Laura W. White.

The Makefield Driving Park, or more correctly speaking, the race track on the farm of Frank Slack, about half a mile beyond Dolington, was thrown open for public inspection on Saturday afternoon, at a small admission fee. About 200 persons were on hand to witness the races.

An artesian well had been sunk on School House hill, Yardley. At a depth of 90 feet, forty feet of water was secured.

Rev. Oscar J. Randall, of Langhorne and Yardley, had resigned his clerkship in the Philadelphia pension office, and was to take an advanced course of study at Pennington Seminary.

Neshaminy Falls had closed for the season, after a period of financial success.

William Kinsey, of Bristol, then aged 88 years, has followed the vocation of an auctioneer for a period of 52 years. Jesse G. Webster, of Hulmeville, then 86 years, had cried sales for 55 years. Both had now practically retired, the latter with a record of 1500 sales cried.

The Penn's Park M. E. Sunday school held its annual anniversary the preceding Saturday, pleasantly spending the day in Woodman's woods, four miles from the church.

Zephaniah Force, of Wildman's Corner, had awarded the contract for the erection of a new barn on the site of the one lately destroyed by lightning. C. Yalley Stradling, of Oxford Valley, was the lucky bidder to receive the contract. There were six bidders, there being a difference of $876 between the highest and lowest bids.

Hulmeville Boy Scouts Enjoy Hallowe'en Frolic

HULMEVILLE, October 31. — The Hulmeville Boy Scouts enjoyed a frolic here Friday evening, the affair taking the form of a Hallowe'en party in Henry's Hall.

On this occasion the members of the Scout committee of the borough, as well as the parents, were invited to participate. Scoutmaster Lloyd Bucher was in charge of the affair, while Assistant Scoutmaster Richard Hopkins was in charge of a drill in which the scouts participated.

The Scout committee of the borough consists of: Messrs. Samuel J. Illick, Albert Kauffman, Thomas Longhurst, Charles Haefner, and the Rev. John Raymond Crosby, and Rev. Walter H. Canon.

Games interested all for some time, the peanut scramble and drill being much enjoyed. The boys' Hallowe'en costumes were original and provoked much merriment. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Ida Appleton Is Hostess At Card Party

Mrs. Ida Appleton entertained the "Jolly Eight" card club, of which she is a member, at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Marshall, of 1017 Pond street, on Tuesday evening.

The game of "500" was played. Those making the highest scores were: Mrs. Alfred McLaughlin, Mrs. David Fenton and Mrs. Stacy Cullen. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

SYNOPSIS

In 1896 Bob, son of Hank Armstrong, a horse fancier, knowing his father's hatred for machines, is secretly inventing gasoline engines and openly courting Rose Robbins. Hank, discovering Bob's interest in automobiles, horsechips him. Rose intervenes but Bob leaves home. She promises to wait for him. Steve Bentley, Bob's rival, later proposes to Rose. She refuses him and he decides to even up scores. Steven, recognizing the "Red Demon" of some automobile racing posters as Bob, slyly tells Hank, whose mind is almost deranged through hatred of machines and loss of his son, that sulphur in the gas tank will cause an explosion.

Steve smiled again, looked down along the row of empty stalls, and then, without waiting for an answer, strolled forward into the stables. Hank stood, bewildered, for Steve had uttered the very words he had been thinking. But he turned and followed along through the litter of straw and harness, now dirty and dull from disuse. Dust and cobwebs filled the corners that had once been immaculately clean. Feed bins stood empty, where once they had been full of sweet-smelling grains and hay.

As Steve came to Bright Eyes' stall he stopped and scratched the nose of the mare. But the horse turned her head away. Hank, a few paces in the rear, stopped, too. He watched while Steve examined

All about him were evidences of decay.

Bright Eyes with what seemed to be sincere interest and admiration. And as the horse-lover saw his favorite and last-remaining animal once more an object of attention, he thawed, and his heart began to warm towards this young man, who evidently had other thoughts than speed and auto racing.

"What do you want for her?" Steve questioned, turning to Hank. "She's Sloe Eyes' colt," Hank answered curtly, shaking his head, "and I wouldn't sell her for anything."

Steve nodded understandingly—even sympathetically, and turned again to admire the mare, who fussed and pawed the ground. But as Hank stepped into the stall and scratched her ears and rubbed her neck, the mare quieted down and nosed her owner affectionately.

"How about a little drink while we talk things over," Steve suggested, jerking his head towards the saloon across the lot.

Hank shrugged his shoulders indifferently, and followed Steve, who led the way over to the bar. But even there time had changed things. True the mahogany top was still damp as ever, and the spittoons as bright as ever. But on the wall were now to be seen engravings of automobiles and the most famous racers of the day. The old prints of horses had been removed, along with those of the prize fighters, who had been superseded by their victors. And the customers. Where once horse lovers had gathered, whip in hand, to discuss the sulky races, now stood motorists in dusters and caps with goggles.

As Steve and Hank entered, the bartender was showing a large picture to a little group of his patrons. Everyone was discussing the matter with animation. The bartender reached up over the cash register and took from its hook the one remaining picture of a horse. He reached over, picked up his latest acquisition, and hung it on the same nail. Steve caught a glimpse from the end of the bar where he and Hank were standing, of the same Red Demon of the poster. And, like the picture on the poster, the goggles were pulled down over the face so obscuring the features as to render them unrecognizable.

Steve glanced surreptitiously at Hank from the corner of his eye. But Hank was scowling at the displacement of the first picture for the second.

"That's the way it is everywhere," one of the motorists at the center of the bar was saying. "The horse has to go to make room for the automobile."

The other motorists agreed, but Hank was glaring angrily at the spokesman. Steve watched Hank closely, and as he saw the older man's hatred rising, he smiled and called the bartender over and gave the order. Then he turned to Hank. "Those fellows sure have more faith in autos than I have," he laughed, covertly watching the effect of his remark on his companion. "But I'll bet if they'd seen what I saw, they'd all quit driving."

Hank looked up at Steve enquiringly as the bartender slid two beers across the counter.

"What'd you mean?" Hank asked, interested.

"I saw an automobile blow up," Steve answered impressively. "Some powdered sulphur accidentally got into the gasoline tank, and when the engine got hot—Blewie!" He threw up his hands, imitating a car blowing up.

Hank stared at Steve in astonishment. But Steve casually raised his glass and looked over the foaming top. In the mirror before him he could mark every expression that crossed the older man's face. And Hank was thoughtfully considering the case and sipping his beer. Steve set his glass down and lighted a cigarette. Then he began to laugh softly.

"What's the matter?" queried Hank.

"I'll bet if that Red Demon's car blew up in front of the crowd in the grandstand tomorrow no one would ever ride in automobile again," Steve laughed and turned back to his glass of beer and the mirror.

Hank looked at Steve thoughtfully. He clenched the handle of his glass, and his lips tightened. Then he stole a furtive glance at his companion and cleared his throat.

"An' you say that powdered sulphur did it?" His tone was just a little too careless. His own words seemed to be coming from his throat, but from some far-off distance.

"Sure," Steve was puffing on his cigarette, "the same stuff you keep in your stable to doctor your horses' hoofs."

Hank jumped nervously, and glanced quickly at Steve. But Steve was ostensibly beckoning to the bartender and inviting Hank to have another beer. Hank shook his head at the invitation.

"I guess I got to go," he mumbled, shuffling instead. "It's time to feed Bright Eyes." He started slowly towards the door, his shoulders bent, his head low.

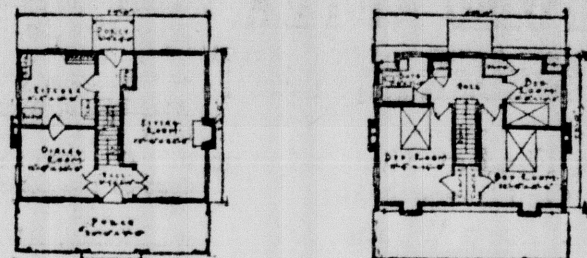

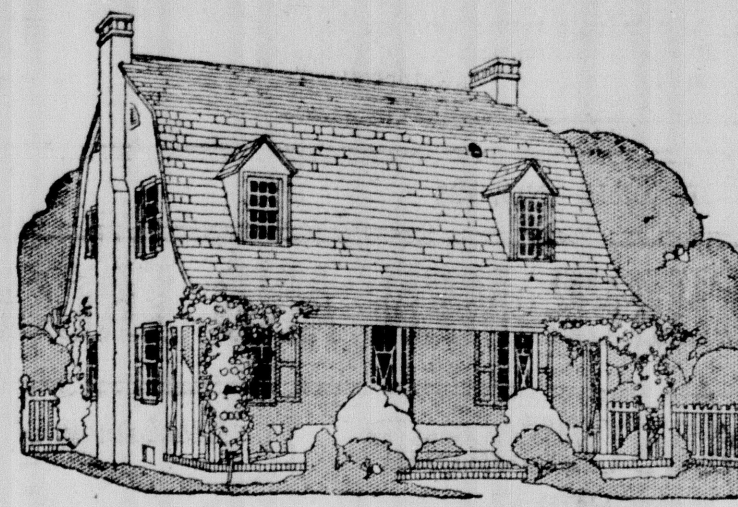

Steve watched him go, smiling into the mirror, and turned once more to his glass and took a long, deep drink. Then he laughed to himself, as he watched Hank crossing the lot to the stable.

As Hank entered the door he stared about him as though looking at the place for the first time. He walked down between the rows of stalls, pausing to look in at each one. He recalled the names of the horses that had once occupied those very stalls. This one had been called Red Top—what races she had run; that one Jinnie—sold her to Luke Mason; and Roscoe! there was a beautiful piece of horse flesh—a stallion that had sired some of the best racers round; and here was Sloe Eyes' old stall—the stall in which she lay when she died. Hank's eyes filled with tears, and he touched the halter hanging from a nail there. It broke beneath his fingers, rotted. He shook his head sadly and walked out into the yard in the rear.

All about him were evidences of decay. The yard was enclosed by a board fence, once always freshly whitewashed, but now, battered by winter snows and summer suns, the boards were loose and swinging. The grass ran wild. Broken wheels, shafts, an old sulky, and what had once been a smart looking trap, mingled their remnants together. Hank passed his hand across his eyes as though he were in a daze. His head was reeling; his breath came quick and hot.

He stood before a large frame house, decorated with cupolas and jig-saw scroll work. Two great iron dogs played on the well kept lawn. A trap, with shining brasses, halted before the door. A negro coachman drew up his spirited pair of horses, their necks arched by short check reins. He saw a woman, dressed in a pale, lavender silk, with a modish bustle, tight sleeves and a small, tipped hat, come out on the arm of a man, and the two stepped into the trap. A merry party of people in a surrey passed and bowed. He saw a man and a woman come by on horseback, the woman riding side-saddle, her long skirts billowing about her stirrups. He started forward, removing his hat with a sweeping gesture.

Electric Refrigeration Adds To Civilization Development

Now that the electric refrigeration industry has found a way to provide low temperatures at will, down to a point well below zero, it is interesting to speculate what effect the applications of such temperatures will have upon industry and society as a whole.

Civilization's development has been the direct outgrowth of mankind's use of the higher ranges of temperatures—heat. It was applied successively to preparation of food, weapons and then in the higher stages of social development, to the production of power and the wide ramifications of modern industrial and social life.

"Already industry is beginning to experiment with the lower notes of the heat octave and is beginning to find curious and unexpected uses for cold," says E. G. Biechler, president and general manager of Frigidaire Corporation. This organization is a subsidiary of General Motors and the outstanding leader in the electrical refrigeration field.

"Our concern is using electric refrigeration to test its products before shipping them to cold latitudes. They are tested with a temperature of seven degrees below zero before they are crated for shipment. Another firm uses this form of refrigeration to bring its product from a liquid to a semi-liquid before wrapping. It is a manufacturer of cosmetics. A manufacturer of dry batteries keeps his mixtures in electrically refrigerated cold storage, where they are held in a state of perfect preservation until they are placed in the batteries. Botanical gardens are using it to grow arctic plants under glass right alongside tropical flora.

"Much progress has already been made in the better known fields for refrigeration. Grocers, meat dealers, florists, confectioners, candy makers and the like have already accepted it and it is well on its way to general adoption in these lines. How much farther the idea may be carried is a matter of conjecture.

"A famous golf ball, having a liquid center, is manufactured through use of Frigidaire. The liquid is frozen before it is wrapped, and allowed to thaw out afterwards.

"It is being used to cool water intended for use in Turkish baths. It is being tried out with the idea of cooling barber shops and similar places. It may eventually make its way into the cooling of private offices and public gathering places.

"One concern, packer of spices, keeps all its waxed paper used for packaging coffee thoroughly chilled so the wax does not melt and either run off, or spread itself over the coffee.

"Nickel and copper plating is being done with the aid of this new refrigeration system. The necessary chemical baths are kept at a proper temperature throughout the entire plating operation to insure an even deposit of the plating substance.

"Progressive architects and builders are providing it in new homes and apartments. The general public is becoming familiar with its advantages and is requiring it, just the same as it expects bathtubs and furnaces."

Garrick Theatre Now Featuring "2 Girls Wanted"

The first John Golden offering of the season came to the Garrick Theatre, last Monday night, October 24th. It is "2 Girls Wanted," Gladys Unger's sparkling comedy which ran for 41 weeks at the Little Theatre in New York last season.

A John Golden presentation is invariably of interest to theatre-goers for it usually brings a clean-cut comedy, adroitly written, perfectly staged and excellently played by a cast of carefully chosen actors. "2 Girls Wanted" was staged by Winchell Smith, the genius who had so much to do with "Turn of the Mind," "Lightnin'," "3 Wise Men," "Pigs," "Thank-U" and other Golden hits. This Gladys Unger comedy fits snugly within the long-established John Golden formula for wholesomeness and artistic entertainment.

The comedy tells, in a happy way, how two sisters from a small New England town—one a pert, attractive youngster of seventeen, and the other slightly older—come to New York and surmount the obstacles that block their path to success. The opening scene is laid in a small New York hall bedroom, with the Third Avenue elevated rumbling by. The other scenes are in the offices of a Wall Street magnate and a palatial country home on Long Island.

The same cast which presented "2 Girls Wanted" all of last season on Broadway is in Philadelphia. Although favorites in New York, a number of the principals will make their initial bow to local theatre-goers. Heading the cast is Nydia Westman, who first appeared under the Golden banner with the late Frank Bacon in "Light-nin." She has had the leading role in two Golden hits on Broadway, "Pigs" and "2 Girls Wanted." Playing opposite is Donald Foster, one of Broadway's best romantic leading men. Others in the original cast include Mary Phillips, Frank Monroe, Grace Menken, Charles Laite, Mary Hampton, Charlotte Denniston, May Duryea, Herbert Saunders, John Humphrey and John LeFevre.

Getting the other fellow's customers away from him is not nearly so important as keeping our own customers safe and satisfied.

on both sides. Bristol got the ball on the Lansdale territory where it remained for the quarter. Bristol, 6; Lansdale, 6.

Last Period

Right from the start of the final quarter Bristol started with an aerial attack that brought the fans to their feet. "Bud" David shot four beauties and three were completed. One long pass from Bristol's 40 yard line to Cook was carried down the field for a touchdown by the fleet end, making the score 13-6, in favor of Bristol.

Eddie Roe and Frank Cook played wonderful defensive games, stopping the visitors' backs in their tracks repeatedly. Al Baur, Corrigan, Lippincott, Smith, Logan, Lawler and Johnson were stalwarts on defense.

The entire backfield, including Sackville, Rogers, Coyle, Fine, David, McIlvaine and Weissblatt, showed wonderful offensive power and should win many games for Bristol.

Line-up:	Lansdale
Bristol	Hunsworth
Bauer	left guard
Corrigan	Wm. McIntyre
Logan	right guard
Johnson	right tackle
Lawler	right end
Sackville	quarterback
Coyle	right halfback
Fine	fullback

Substitutes—Bristol: Lippincott for Johnson, Vandegrift for Fagley, Cook for Lawler, McIlvaine for Rogers, David for Coyle, Weissblatt for Sackville.

Lansdale: Swigart for Swartz, McGill for Malander, Boland for Baughman, P. McIntyre for O'Brien, Flarey for McIntyre.

Touchdowns—Detweller, Fine, Cook.

Time of periods—15 minutes.

notable speakers. She further told of Mussolini's constructive use of free motion pictures in the open squares of Rome to teach lessons of health, good citizenship and world events, and deplored the low value of the great bulk of films shown in the United States.

With Mrs. Elwood Harrar, of the Chalfont Community Club, as leader, club extension work was ably presented by five two-minute speakers: Mrs. George Bennett, of Woodside; Mrs. Ferdinand Sommer, of Quakertown; Mrs. Henry Ancker, of Bristol; Mrs. William Kelly, of Warrington, and Mrs. Henry Eastwood, of Buckingham. The speakers, unknown to themselves at the time, were contestants for a prize and the winner, Mrs. William Kelly, it was announced, is to be sent to deliver the same speech at the Southeastern district meeting where they will again enter a contest whose winner shall speak at the General Federation in San Antonio, Texas.

The luncheon hour was greatly enjoyed with Sorois, the hostess club, supplementing the box lunches by serving coffee and ice cream.

In the afternoon 15 of the 16 clubs responded to the roll call with the following representation: Bristol Travel Club, 12; Buckingham Woman's Club, 9; Bucks County W. C. T. Mrs. Arthur Hagar sang a group of two Indian love songs, first reading the poems that all might appreciate the beauty of the words as well as the music.

Miss Katharine Scheit, chairman of junior clubs of the county, gave a reading from "The Palace of the King," by Marion Crawford. Miss Schell won great applause for her masterful rendition of Crawford's words of intrigue and passion and responded with "The King's Breakfast," by A. R. Milne as an encore. Mrs. Raymond D. Stone supplementing her at the piano with very appropriate music.

Mrs. W. S. Erdman, as chairman of the program committee, announced the topic of the afternoon as "International Relations," and introduced Miss Miriam Broadhurst as the first speaker. Miss Broadhurst spent 10 weeks abroad and was one of the 1100 attending the Locarno Conference of the "New Education Fellowship," organized in 1921, where most of the progressive nations of the world were represented. Many made great sacrifices to attend; some Swedish women paid their car-fare one way to the conference, but planned to make the homeward journey several hundred miles afoot.

At this conference it was claimed that although the United States has schools attended by both boys and girls, we do not have real co-education here as is being tried in the English experimental schools.

Dr. Lucy G. Wilson of the South Philadelphia Girls' High School, was one of the finest speakers representing the U. S., she said, but on the other hand this country was represented by one woman who used so much slang that she was known as the "swearing American." "Work done in the spirit of play has the only true seriousness," was quoted by Miss Broadhurst as epitomizing the prevailing spirit of the entire conference. The next conference will probably be held in Copenhagen two years hence. Mrs. Laura Hungerford Halmbach's violin solo, "Meditation," from "Thais," was sympathetically rendered and appreciatively received as was her beautiful encore.

Dr. Jesse H. Holmes, of Swarthmore

College, although speaking on some phases of internationalism, announced he would allow his audience to guess his subject at the conclusion of his remarks.

Defining patriotism, Dr. Holmes said: "If you want to say anything powerfully you always say something else. When we say we love our country we mean we love not actually 'our rocks and pills,' but a revered group of ideals and institutions."

"What does all this warfare and revolution settle? Only one thing— which of two parties is stronger. Our forefathers, who wrote the Constitution, realized that this same aim could be accomplished by counting those of the opposing parties, hence our scheme of voting—our election."

"Our whole system of government depends on the fact that we are capable of distinguishing folly from wisdom. Therefore the only safe way in our democracy is to let every one be heard and to trust to us to discard the folly."

Dr. Holmes' defense of free speech and explanation of the Russian situation was illuminating and delivered with delightful satire. He said: "Next time you hear a dangerous extremist hire a hall for him and every one will go away disgusted, but shut him up in jail and people will say 'That man is a martyr, he has something splendid to say that they don't want us to hear.' Can't we trust ourselves to distinguish the chaff from the wheat?"

"Your loyalty to your government ought to be like your loyalty to your automobile—to keep it in good working order. You must pay attention to the parts that are not working well."

"The United States did not come ready made; it is in the process of being made."

"One of the problems of America is the proper division of the wealth we create. Another is the fact that the farmer is not getting a square deal. International relations also present problems as yet unsolved, but justice can never be secured by the folly of war."

"Our American citizenship has become rather mouldy when less than 50 per cent. of our citizens go to the polls to vote and many who do go might as well stay home so far as their understanding of the problems involved is concerned.

"One of the greatest provocatives of war is brought about by the men who go adventuring in business into foreign lands and try to take the United States government along. That is, if they meet misadventure, instead of playing the game and being good sports, they whine to their government to be protected by arms."

"I appeal to you for a broader sympathy and a broader understanding of the people of the earth as they struggle to establish better governments."

A native Chinese student of Bryn Mawr College, Miss Vaughn Ti Bang, delighted her audience by explaining in charming English how the Republic of China is being established and developed in her talk, "A Glimpse of China."

The meeting adjourned to meet the last Friday in April at Chalfont as guests of the Chalfont Community Club.

"Ann is going to get married!"

"YES! She's engaged to a nice boy. He's not making a big salary yet, but he's a hard worker. They'll have to be careful of their money at first!"

Careful of their money! With a home to find, furniture to buy, marketing to learn . . . with the thousand and one little emergencies to meet that newly-weds never dream of! . . .

And a young girl, inexperienced in these practical problems, is expected to be careful of her money!

Ann will bless advertising. In the pages of her magazines and newspapers, she will find the very experience she lacks—the advice she needs!

It is when every penny counts that advertising gives its best service. The advertisements you read are valuable lessons in everyday economy. They help, as nothing else can, to make your dollar go the longest distance. For advertisements show you which article, at the price you are willing to pay, is going to suit you best. And the very fact that it is advertised is its guarantee that it will give you satisfaction after you have bought it.

The advertisements in this newspaper are a most valuable guide to wise buying. It pays to read them regularly
